Greetings, and welcome to the second issue of Clinical Research in Practice: Journal of Team Hippocrates. We are pleased to announce that our first issue was a great success, with 9 papers garnering almost 400 downloads from around the world. Crucial to this success were the efforts of the authors, and their work to make relevant and meaningful appraisals of the literature in order to answer important clinical questions. Furthermore, our growing editorial board and peer reviewers have performed admirably, ensuring that the quality of the published work exceeds what is merely acceptable. Finally, we would be remiss to not recognize the colossal efforts of our graduating Senior Student Editor, Dr. Anthony Provenzano. The launch of this journal would not have happened without his substantial managerial contributions. He has built a solid foundation, which we hope to advance in the year to come.

Replacing Dr. Provenzano in the role of Senior Student Editor are Tim Caldwell and John Dawdy. Both are in their final year of medical school at Wayne State University. Tim is an MD/PhD student who studied cancer biology for his PhD, and John previously earned his MHS at Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health.

We are exceedingly excited for the coming year and aim to continue producing a valuable educational resource for both students and our readers alike.

Sincerely,

Tim Caldwell & John Dawdy
Senior Student Editors

J. TIMOTHY CALDWELL, B.S., and JOHN DAWDY, B.Sc., MHS., are students in the Wayne State University School of Medicine and the current Senior Student Editors of CRP.
