CLINICAL SOCIOLOGY REVIEW

Volume 8, 1990

Clinical Sociology Review is published annually by the Michigan State University Press, in association with the Sociological Practice Association, a Professional Organization of Clinical and Applied Sociologists. Abstracts of all articles appear in Sociological Abstracts and selected abstracts appear in Social Work Research and Abstracts.

Clinical Sociology is the creation of new systems as well as the intervention in existing systems for purposes of assessment and/or change. Clinical sociologists are humanistic scientists who are multi-disciplinary in approach. They engage in planned social change efforts by focusing on one system level (e.g., interpersonal small group, organization, community, international), but they do so from a sociological frame of reference.

Clinical Sociology Review publishes articles, essays, and research reports concerned with clinical uses of sociological theory, findings or methods, which demonstrate how clinical practice at the individual, small group, large organization or social system level contributes to the development of theory, or how theory may be used to bring about change. Articles in the Review are generally expected to be relevant to intervention at some level. Articles may also be oriented to the teaching of clinical sociology. Manuscripts will be reviewed both for merit and for relevance to the special interests of the Review.

Manuscripts submissions should follow the American Sociological Association style guidelines, including reference citation style, and should include an abstract. There is a $10.00 processing fee which is waived for members of the Sociological Practice Association. Send four copies of the manuscript to: David J. Kallen, Editor, Clinical Sociology Review, Department of Pediatrics/Human Development, Michigan State University, East Lansing, MI 48824; (517) 353-0709. When possible, final copies of accepted manuscripts should be sent on a 5 1/4-inch IBM compatible computer disk. Inquiries may be addressed to the Editor at his bitnet address: 13642 KAL at MSU. Fax (517) 353-8464.
