Acknowledgments

I should like to thank the numerous individuals and university departments that helped to make the Particularism conference at SUNY at Buffalo and this publication possible: in particular the co-chairmen of the conference, Professors Lee Dryden and Robert Newman; Roland Le Huenen, Jones Professor of French at SUNYAB; Professors Robert Chumbley and Neal Stolfus of Louisiana State University, who accepted the task of translating René Thom's paper on unreasonably short notice, as well as Professor Pierre Gaillard of SUNYAB, who helped with an earlier text of Professor Thom's; the translators of Roland Kany's paper, Professors Ronald Hauser, Peter Heller, and Max Wickert of SUNYAB; Professors Martha Nussbaum of Brown University and Lawrence Blum of the University of Massachusetts at Boston, whose joint contribution was greatly appreciated despite its regretted absence from these pages. Several assistants, notably Randy Prus and Jonathon Havey, provided invaluable help during the earlier stages of this project, and without Karita France's more recent devoted efforts I would not have been able to prepare the Introduction and Bibliography nor move the material towards publication. The depleted secretarial staff of the English department has also extended itself on my behalf.

For generous assistance with the expenses of the conference I wish to offer my thanks to the Dean's Office, Arts and Letters, the Butler Chair in English, the Jones Chair in French, the Raymond Chair in Classics, the Department of Mathematics, the School of Medicine, the Department of Philosophy, and the Program in Semiotics, as well as to the Conferences in the Disciplines Program and the Research Foundation, all of SUNYAB.

Finally, I am happy to have this opportunity to express both my personal and my professional gratitude to the editors of Criticism for volunteering their journal and for their interest in the Particularism project.
